

We are pleased to announce that Greek Association of Compliance Officers is organising in partnership with Palladian Conferences for second consecutive year the forum titled: “Compliance in the new era: technology, transformation and outward orientation”. The Forum will take place at Divani Caravel Hotel in Athens, September, 27th 2019.

TOPICS

Panel I: Going digital: Business opportunities and challenges arising - The skills of the “modern” Compliance Officer

New technologies and PSD2 are transforming traditional banking, altering the role, responsibilities and skills of Compliance Officers. Which business opportunities arise and how does technology affect day to day banking? Which are the new tools and processes for dealing with data protection, confidentiality, regulatory reporting and competition issues?

Panel II: IDD and MiFID II: Consumer protection and transparency

Following the adoption of IDD and MiFID II, the new regulatory landscape imposes additional rules to finance and insurance organisations, enforcing a stricter framework for the distribution of products and services to consumers. While both Directives share common goals, there are significant differences in their scope, obligations and methodology. Which are the key provisions of these Directives and their effect on the design, development and distribution of products for banks, asset managers, insurers and other distributors of financial and insurance products?

Panel III: Anti-money laundering issues: The journey from the 4th to the 6th AML Directive

Three AML directives in six years (2015-2021). How did we get here? What are the changes for AML Officers and how can the risk-based approach be put to practice? Which tools are on the way? How are supervisors evolving? Which risks arise from embargoes and cryptocurrencies?

Panel IV: Ethics in the digital era

Ethical issues in the new digital organization: Corporate governance, conflict of interest, whistleblowing etc. The role of the Compliance Officer; new tools and challenges
